

Chris Kotsen, PsyD, CTT is a licensed NJ psychologist and NJ certified tobacco treatment specialist who has been on the Medical and Dental Staff at Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital Somerset since 1998. Since 2002, he has run all tobacco treatment services which involve outpatient individual/group specialty treatment with his team. Additionally, he assisted the hospital in developing a bedside inpatient tobacco treatment program and continues with leading corporate and community worksite Quit Group programs. In 2009, he became part of the Lung Cancer Institutes' Multidisciplinary Team at the Steeplechase Cancer Center and assisted the program in developing and implementing the first Lung Cancer Screening Center in 2012 in the state of NJ. Here, he continues with pairing tobacco treatment services with Lung Cancer Screening services, for best clinical practices. He continues to be involved in expanding business practices, integrating evidence based research within clinical practice settings, and in the development of policy issued that support sustained treatment for tobacco users.
